

Miss E. M. Hutchinson.
A.A.N.S.

I embarked in September, 1916, on the "Kashgar" as a passenger. We had no sickness on board, and on arriving in Bombay, I went on duty for a few days at a British Hospital. We took in medical cases, malaria and dysentery from Mesopotamia. The food was quite good, and we had a good many amusements. We were very comfortably billeted, but the heat was very trying. We had a long day on and a half day off nearly always, unless we were too busy.

From there I went to Secunderabad, which was a Station Hospital, and had previously been a cavalry barracks, but lent itself very well for a Hospital. Most of the cases were malaria in a malignant form, but the patients responded well to the treatment. We were extremely well billeted.

I left there, and after relieving in Bombay for a short time, I crossed to England, and was sent to No. 3 A.A.H., Dartford, where I am still on duty.

The work here is not heavy, because most of the patients are waiting transport to Australia.
