I embarked on the 31st August, 1915, on the "Morea," and we had a most uninteresting trip. We had hardly any sickness, and so did very little duty. We stayed a few days at Cairo, and then went to Helouan, where we had a Hospital for Officers and men. There were about 1500 convalescents, and it was a delightful place. There were lovely grounds, and we were extremely comfortable. We had eight sisters and a Matron. I was there until March, and then I joined No. 1 Sea Transport Section. I did transport duty until March, 1917.

We took in all kinds of cases, mostly walking. On our return trip, we brought back troops. After that I was at No.2 A.A.H., Southall for a period, and then went to Southwell Gardens, a Hospital for sick sisters. The upkeep was maintained by Mrs. Hall, and the place was very well equipped.

I went from there to No. 2 Command Depot, Weymouth, which was a large camp Hospital. We had very severe cases there. The food was excellent, and the place well established. From there, I went to France, to No. 2 A.G.H., Wimereux, and there we had surgical work. It was very well equipped and comfortable here. I was in the Femur Ward, which was most interesting. We had the usual treatment, and the patients made good progress. I was there until March, when I went to No. 3 A.C.C.S., in Germany. We had a beautiful Hospital here, which used to be a deaf and dumb institute. The patients were well fed, food of all kinds being easily procured. We had infectious cases, and a few accidents, but the work was not too heavy.
